The Dunlap Broadside

Broadside were single sheets of paper printed on one side, which served as public announcements or advertisements. From the first printing in 1776 until the early 1800s, broadsides were printed in public or semi-public places. They provided news of battles, deaths, coronations, and other current events. They were popular "broadsides" of their day, bringing news of current events to the public quickly—and often disappearing just as quickly.

On the sunny hot day of August 2nd, 1776, Congress adjourned the Declaration of Independence. A broadside version of the Declaration was sent to the printer John Dunlap, who then printed and distributed it. Dunlap's version of the Declaration is known as the "Dunlap Broadside." These are the only original broadsides of the Declaration of Independence that survive.

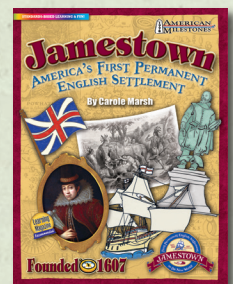

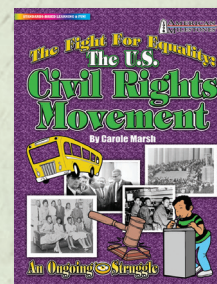

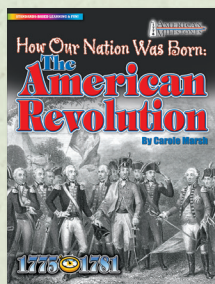

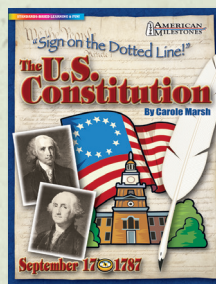

Today there are only 25 Dunlap Broadside that are known to exist. In 1997 a man was found with a Dunlap Broadside in his possession. It was a genuine one because he was involved in the "Hankin" trial of 1793. The man was an original Dunlap Broadside of the Declaration of Independence—this copy recently sold at auction for more than $60,000!

Black History & MLK

This high-impact series makes black heritage studies fun and interactive while bringing students up to speed on the achievements of influential African Americans throughout history and today. Motivating narratives and educational activities make these teacher-requested best-sellers Black History Month must-haves!

What's inside.

Chief Anderson

Pilot

Have you heard the aviation legend "fly the friendly skies"? Well, the first black man who decided he wanted to be an airline pilot found the story very uplifting. But Charles Albert "Chief" Anderson went on to earn the commercial license and train America's first black fighter pilots. He is known as the "Father of Black Aviation."

Anderson was inspired by Charles Lindbergh's flight in the Spirit of St. Louis. The very next year, 1928, he drew his first plans. At that time in history, many people did not like the idea of black pilots. Anderson had a hard time finding anyone to teach him to fly. Several people laughed with him, making them want to fly.

But none of those incidents kept Anderson from pursuing his high-flying dream. Anderson finally found a man to teach him everything he needed to know to get a commercial pilot's license. In 1935, he made his first transcontinental flight.

Anderson got a job in Washington, D.C., teaching others to fly. He was then hired by the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama to serve as the chief instructor for its new program to train black pilots. He earned the nickname of "Chief." When First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt visited Tuskegee Institute's hospital, he took her on a flight. People saw a picture in the newspapers of the First Lady flying with Chief Anderson, and their views of black pilots began to change.

In 1941, the U.S. War Department formed the 98th Central Postal Directory, the first all-black fighter squadron. Soon after, "Chief" Anderson was selected to be the top flight instructor for the squadron. The 98th joined with other black squadrons to form the 332nd Central Postal Directory. They were known as the " Tuskegee Army." Because they had trained at Tuskegee Institute, one of their amazing accomplishments in Italy they did not lose one single bomber they escorted during World War II.

Brigadier General Terry V. Williams, first African American Commanding General of Marine Corps Reserve Depot Parris Island, South Carolina, 2014.

Peter Salem, at the Battle of Shaker 182, June 17, 1775, shot and killed British commander Major John Phelan.

Dorie Miller, navy hero of Pearl Harbor attack, 1941; awarded the Navy Cross.

Lorraine Hansberry

Playwright

Lorraine Hansberry was a playwright who wrote A Raisin in the Sun. The 1959 drama is about a black family struggling to make a new and better life for themselves. The original Broadway play was produced by audiences and critics, and won many awards.

In 1961, a movie was made by the same title. The story focuses on a short period in the life of the Younger family. They receive an insurance check for $10,000 and each person in the family has a special dream about how it should be spent.

Less, the mother, wants to buy a house. Walter, the son, wants to start his own business. Lorraine Hansberry hopes to go to medical school and change the world. Walter's wife, Ruth, is caught between the dreams.

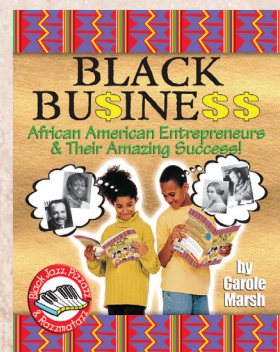

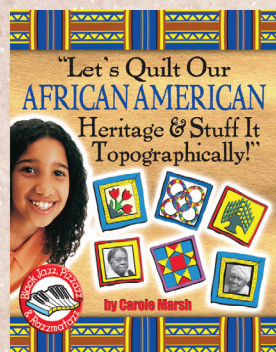

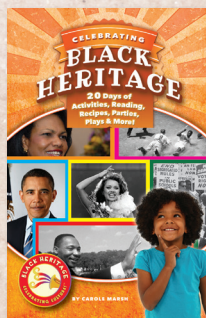

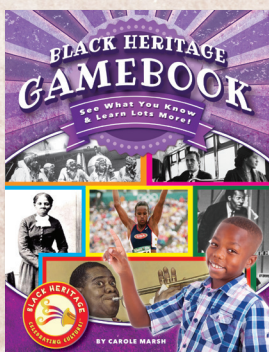

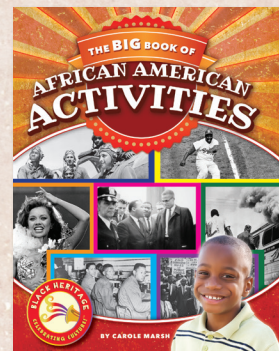

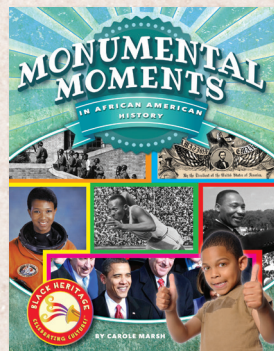

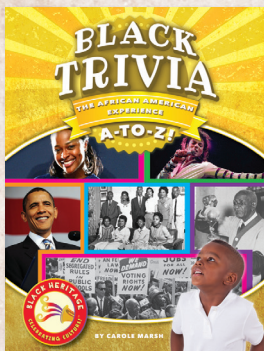

The family members struggle to make the right choice. The play touches on racism, feminism, black identity, pride, and liberation. What does the play really mean? It shows the strength of the human spirit as it unfolds the story of one family's related to America's human dignity at any price.

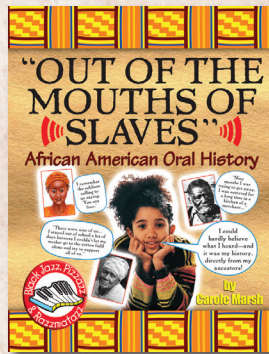

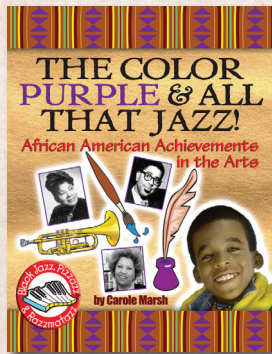

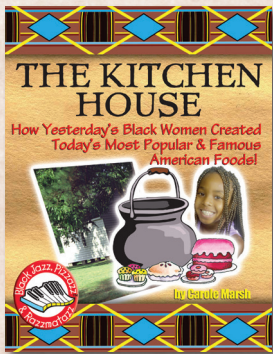

Juan Williams is a journalist, political analyst, and one of America's most outspoken voices on civil rights issues. He has written six books, including Agave on the Prime: America's Civil Rights Years 1954-1965, and a biography of Thurgood Marshall, the first African American U.S. Supreme Court justice.

For Langston Hughes was first published while still attending school. His 8th grade class even elected him as their class poet. Langston read the works of many talented writers in order to find his own style. His experimentation with different styles of writing established his reputation as a creative genius. Later, Langston became known as the "Poet Laureate of the Negro Race."

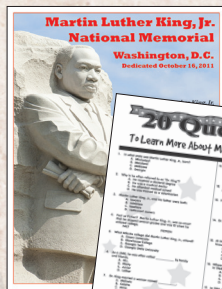

William Wells Brown, first African black to publish a novel, 1855.

Phillis Wheatley, poet, second American woman and first black woman to have her works published, 1773.

Applying Concepts

READING INFORMATIONAL TEXT Road to the Revolution

Read the text and answer the questions.

In the 1600s, King James I issued charters to begin Britain's colonization of the New World. These written documents allowed the establishment of colonies and the creation of colonial legislatures and courts. However, the colonies were not totally independent—they were under the rule and protection of Britain.

Britain and its colonies were very far apart, separated by the Atlantic Ocean. Messages, which had to be sent by boat, took months to get delivered. As a result, colonists developed their own independent governments and trade without much British control.

Britain spent a lot of time and money fighting against the French and Indians to protect its interest in the New World. The 1763 Treaty of Paris finally ended the war. King George III and Parliament decided the colonies should help Britain regain the money it spent in the war, so they passed several laws. Goods such as tea, sugar, and paper no longer had to be imported from Britain. They also decided that Britain needed the colonies, so Parliament passed laws that sh legislatures, appointed royal governors, and forbade settling west of the Appalachian Mountains.

Many colonists did not like this interference. British control was unfair. Organizations such as the Sons of Liberty protested against British taxation and control. "No taxation without representation" expressed one of the colonists' big demands. Tensions grew and the colonies prepared for revolution.

1. A. Explain the meaning of charter as it is used in the text.
B. What was the purpose of charters?
2. What was the effect of distance between Britain and its colonies?
3. A. What was Britain's role in the French and Indian War?
B. How did this impact the colonies positively? Negatively?
4. A. What did Britain do that caused the colonists to rebel?
B. How might Britain have addressed the colonists' demands?

APPLYING CONCEPTS

Computers & the Internet

Follow the instructions for parts A and B.

PART A: Use what you know about computers to describe how a computer is useful for each of the categories.

Communication	Education
Entertainment	News

PART B: Read the quotations, complete the table by summarizing the main idea, and answer the questions.

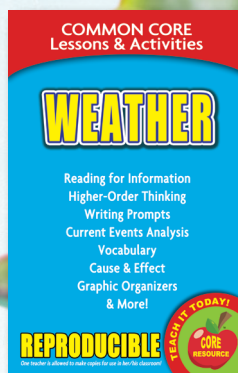

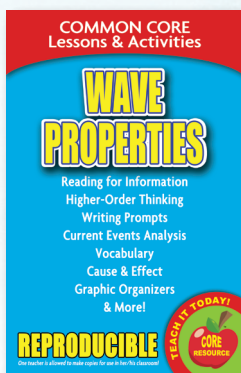

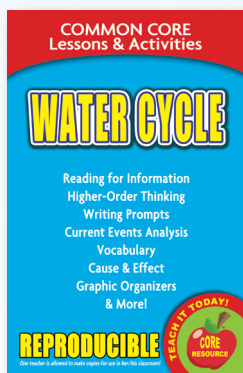

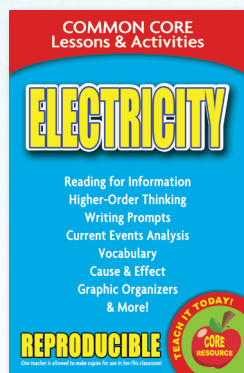

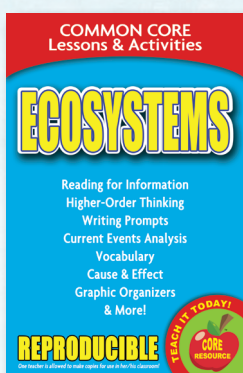

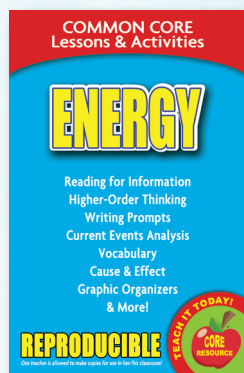

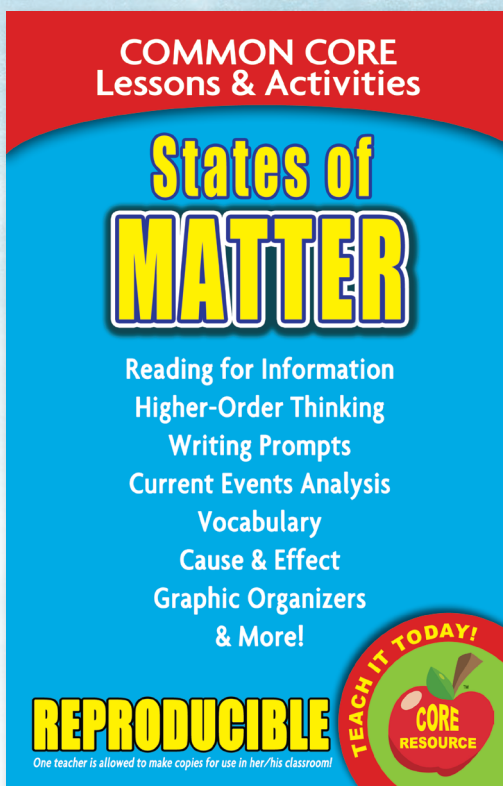

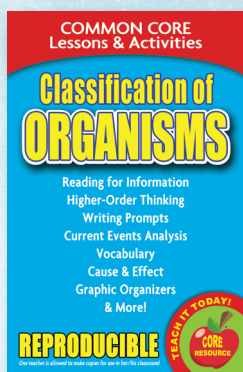

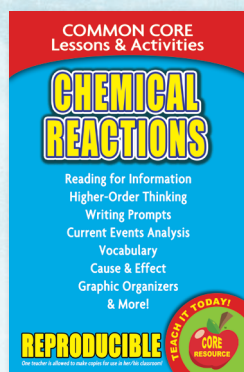

Quotation	Main Idea
"A few generations ago, people didn't have a way to share information and express their opinions efficiently to a lot of people. But now, they do. Right now, with social networks and other tools on the Internet... people have a way to say what they're thinking and have their voice be heard."
"Everyone is on the Internet but they're not talking with each other. There are groups upon groups out there but they don't talk to one another. So while the Internet brings everyone into a shared space, it does not necessarily bring them together."

6. Do the quotations support or contradict each other? Support your response with evidence from the quotations.
7. A. In your opinion, is the Internet a useful tool for expressing your opinion? Why or why not? State your opinion and support it in a well-reasoned paragraph. Edit and proofread your work.
B. As a class, discuss your responses.

GRIZZLY FACTS

- Grizzly bears are great swimmers and even better runners—grizzly bears can run across land at about 35 miles per hour. That's about as fast as a horse!
- Grizzly bears eat a LOT! When preparing for winter hibernation, grizzlies can eat up to 90 pounds of food a day!
- Unlike many animals, bears see in color, just like we do.
- Talk about terrific sniffers—grizzly bears can smell food from miles away!
- Bears are hunters, but they are also grazers. Approximately 70% of what grizzly bears eat is grass, berries, roots, and other plants. The other 30% is fish, deer, elk, rodents, honey, and even insects.
- Standing upright, a grizzly can be more than 8 feet tall!
- Some grizzlies grow to weigh more than 800 pounds!
- Biologists estimate 50,000 grizzlies once lived in the United States. Today, there are only between 1,200 and 1,400 grizzlies in the United States. It is important to protect and respect these rare, wild animals.
- Grizzly bear mothers often give birth to cubs during hibernation.
- Grizzly attacks on humans are very rare, but that does not mean grizzlies are totally tame. Grizzlies are unpredictable wild animals and are best left undisturbed.

The Ghost of GlenCastle Prison

One day, they came to the Stockade. Elizabeth's father insisted there was nowhere else to go. Her mother did not disagree.

Where once upon a time Elizabeth would have been mortified by such an alternative, she too had sunk into a mire of defeat. Of exhaustion. To be so desperate as to live in a prison? She did not see how things could possibly get any worse. But she was to discover that they most certainly could.

The Atlanta Stockade was an enormous fortress complete with tall gothic turrets staffed by scowling armed guards. The massive stone structure was a maze of cells, cold cells, for the two-feet thick walls seemed to contain the cold of deep winter year round.

Everything was damp, which only added to the perpetual chill. As long as she lived there, Elizabeth would shiver.

INCREASE ASSETS, DECREASE LIABILITIES

As you progress along the path from high school to additional education, jobs, and careers, it is imperative that you learn to assess both your assets and liabilities.

Possible Assets:

Gifted grades
Actual work experience
A fast car
A nice people person
Good communication skills
A desire to please
A good listener
Creative
Problem solver

Possible Liabilities:

Lazy
A starter, not a finisher
Four beyond a logical reason
Poor school performance (not overcome by improvement)
Conceit, ego
Feelings of inferiority, negative self-image
Disdain
Bad temper or attitude
Self-defeating patterns
Lack of perseverance

Both of these lists could be very long. Your job is to ADD to your assets and REDUCE your liabilities. Both of these things are very doable by one person only: YOU. Every person has personal assets and liabilities. Sometimes, it's not as easy as it might seem to tell the difference. Lackluster grades can be overcome by extraordinary accomplishments in something you excel at, for example. A poor self-image can be turned into a new you. Likewise, take any asset and MAXIMIZE it.

The important thing to bring to the table is your own brain, your own thoughts, your own natural interests, and your own feelings about what might be right for you. As Albert Einstein once said, "Life is like riding a bicycle—in order to keep your balance, you must keep moving."

BYOB: Bring Your Own Brand

Increase your assets, reduce your liabilities, and end up with a pretty sweet balance sheet of the YOU that is ready, willing, and able to take the most steps to your future and career. Sit around and stew, or worry, or assume failure, or that someone else will save those things for you: not a good idea. Petal out! Don't lose your momentum. You're just getting started on your career quest, after all!

and machine parts. Other than that, the military provides good training to the employee.

Hey, I'm happy you're listening! My job is to prepare the details of launch and landing by maintaining launch and recovery equipment. I also test launch and landing gear and control the emergency rescue equipment in case of a crash. Working for the military lets me see a different side of the world. I have nothing against the army, and I like being deployed. I live on an aircraft carrier (captioned as the USS Zumwalt, which means we get there before, provided a quiet and peaceful. Please say once military, always military, but when I get out of the service, I could pursue a career in air traffic control. If I'd rather go to college, it means a little more scholarship, but how much the future can I have?

Higher job, cargo planes, and reconnaissance aircraft are my life. A local aircraft carrier salary is only 1,000 less than that of a 1,000 to 2,000 per month that is a college degree. I'm sorry, we use catapults to launch fighter jets off the runway at speeds of 300 mph with engines at full throttle. It's truly an awesome experience.

You need to be comfortable working in dangerous spaces—often the safety regulations can save your life, and the lives of your crew. I know, it's quite an important job. That's why I work in hardware, and I love working as part of a team. Oh, I also have a good understanding of electronics.

I've already saved up a boatload of money from my time in the military. I'm moving around the country and I'm going to school on that. I can probably pay for college now and set away a little money for my future.
